Hello, John, it's Christine. I've just looked through the revised slides for your presentation, and they're now much better. I've got a couple of general comments.

You thought there might be too many slides. I don't think that's a problem, though several would be improved if you replaced the statistics. A few words would be easier to take in.

Then don't the slides strike you as looking rather dull and predictable? The content is fine, but the design needs some variety. Maybe adding a few animations would help.

And two quite specific points. Something seems to have gone wrong in slide three. The graph is fine, but I can't make sense of the bar chart. It doesn't bear any relation to what's gone before, or after.

And finally, I remember we discussed the grammar mistake you had in slide six, and you've dealt with that, but if you have another look, I'm sure you'll notice the spelling error that's crept in.

OK, once you've dealt with that, it'll be fine. Goodbye.

Woman: Hello?

Man: It's Peter here from Personnel. The applications for the Publicity Co-ordinator post – how do you want us to sort them?

Woman: First, could you look at the qualifications, and reject those who haven't done media studies. We can do IT training ourselves if necessary.

Man: Right.

Woman: Then the second time around, take a look at the Previous Experience section . . .

Man: Yes.

Woman: And pick out the ones who've worked as part of a project team before.

Man: In a similar company?

Woman: At this stage it doesn't matter whether it's in a service industry or any other kind.

Man: OK. And did you want me to arrange interview dates yet? I'll need to book the rooms well ahead.

Woman: I'll do that when you've decided on the final list. Before the interviews, can you get references for each of the candidates? Don't bother asking for copies of their certificates yet.

Man: No problem . . . and what shall I do with their applications?

Woman: Can you forward them to section heads? They'll probably sort them a bit more before they go to the marketing manager.

Man: I'll do that before I . . .

Thank you for calling Andersons International. Our offices are closed at the moment. Please leave your name, number and message after the tone.

Hello, Martin Hayes here – I've just arrived. The journey was fine, no problems at the airport. I've arrived at the Retail Exhibition – the building's really impressive! The only problem is, the stands that we sent by air cargo last week are missing – the computer's arrived, and the posters are here, though. Can you get onto the transport people first thing in the morning to track them down and get them here by tomorrow evening at the very latest? Stress how urgent it is! Also, I've just unpacked the brochures and realised we haven't got enough price-lists to give out with them. We'll need another five hundred; use a courier to get them out here – the day after tomorrow at the latest. Call me back when you know what's happening. I'm at the press conference all morning today, but you can get me during lunch. I'll speak to you again later.

Good morning. This is Gupta Ramesh from Morgan and Turnbull. We've been having a few security problems lately, so we've reviewed our delivery arrangements. First of all, until further notice, drivers should use the warehouse gate instead of the main factory gate. That's the one in Station Road.

A second point I want to discuss is – as you have heard – we're issuing IDs to replace the general permits drivers are using at the moment. We're sending couriers with them tomorrow morning. They should be placed on the inside of the windscreen to activate the sensor in the gate. It's very important they don't forget to do it because after this week there'll only be automatic access to the yard – we're putting a stop to manual access. And finally – this is a safety measure to reduce vehicle movement in the yard – in future drivers should proceed to the parking area before checking in at reception. I hope this is all clear. Please call me if you have any problem. Bye.
